Implementing Change

Incubate to Innovate equips and empowers educators and students to solve problems and create opportunities together! We designed the ChangeMaker Innovation Process™ to be a framework for an entire school or district to create and sustain exploratory and experiential learning environments while giving students of all ages the skills they need to thrive in today's complex, rapidly changing world. The three processes are written to be developmentally appropriate so PreK-12 can use a common language, which drives systemic and systematic implementation of innovation and impact.

There are seven modes of the ChangeMaker Innovation Process™. Most design thinking processes end with the mode of Create. We designed our process to include the modes of Collaborate & Connect so we can teach students how they can take their ideas and share them with others. We want students to realize that their ideas matter and that they do not have to wait to be adults to make an impact in the world. We also found that these modes help students to move from being consumers of their education to creators, where they are more motivated and engaged because they get to be a part of something bigger than themselves.

Whether you are an individual teacher or an entire school/district, the ChangeMaker Innovation Process™ can enhance your learning experiences and environments.

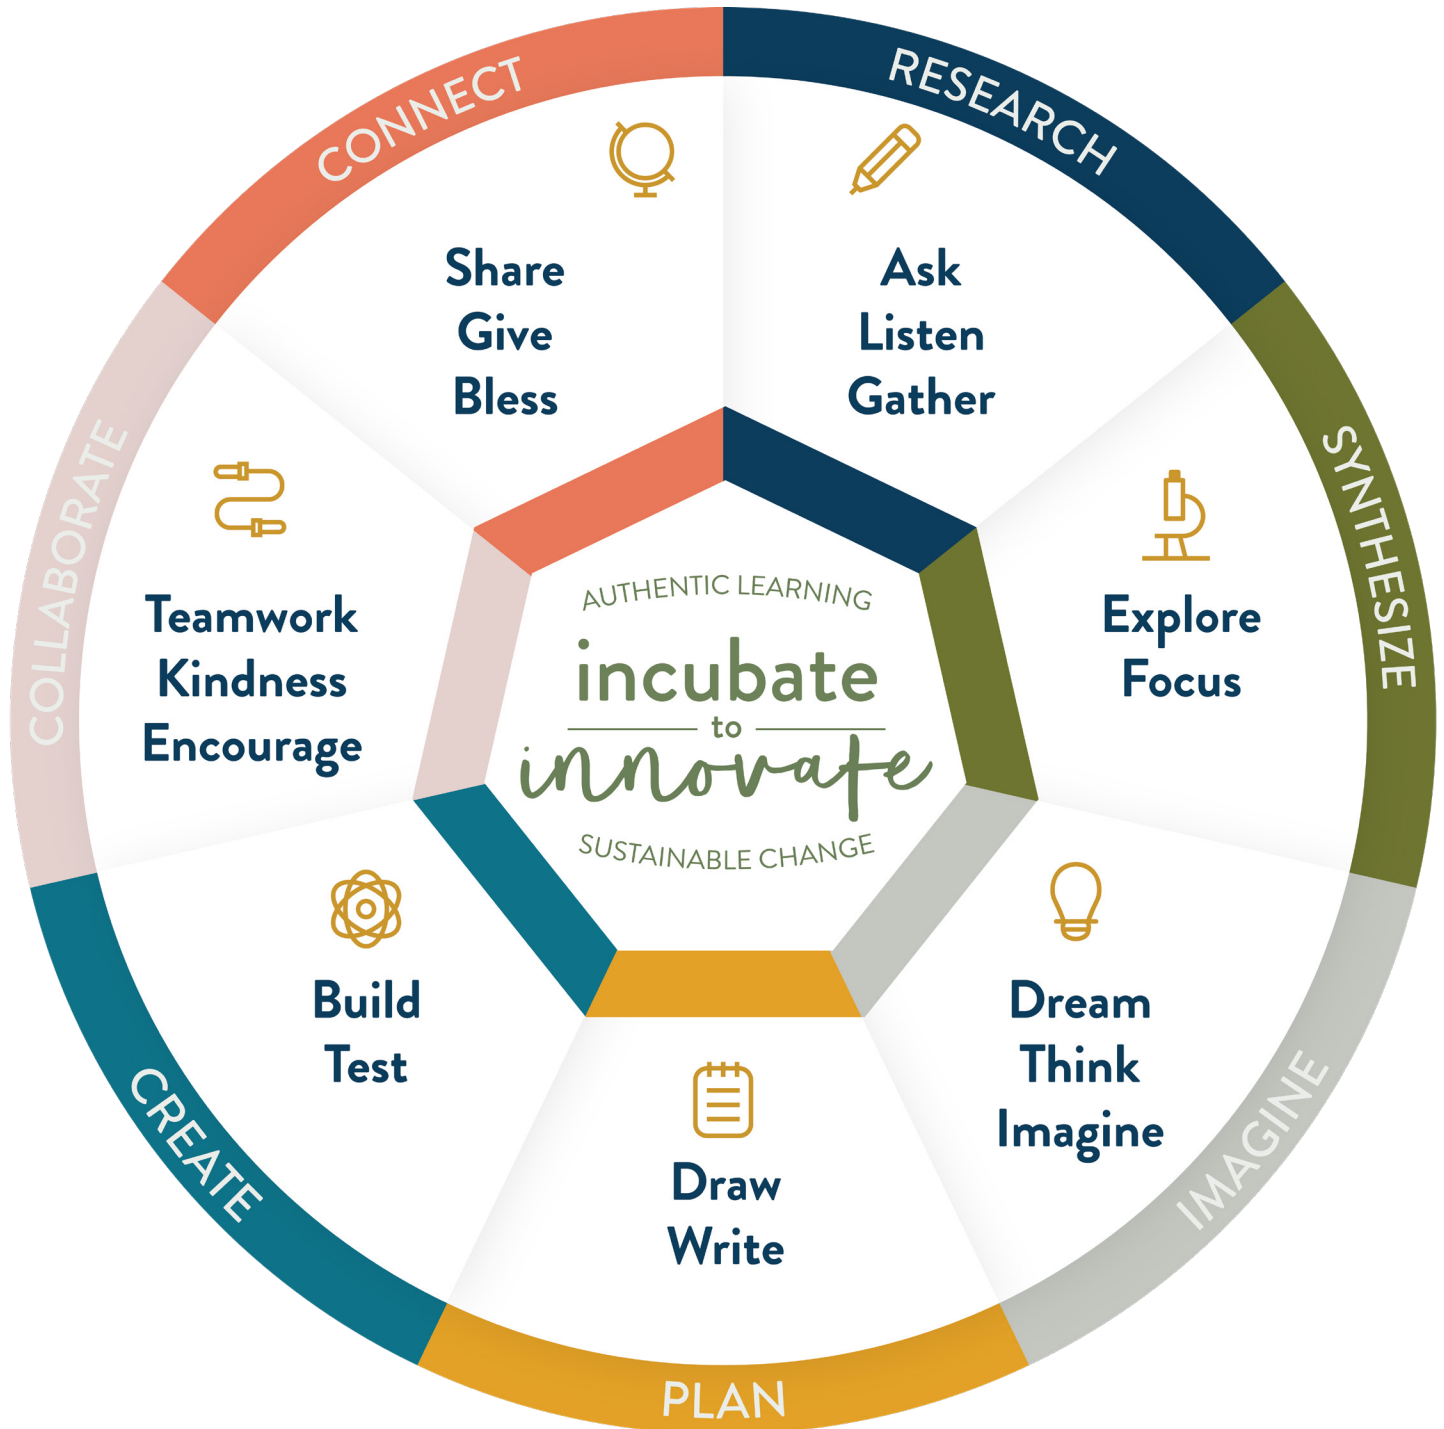

Whether you have a physical Makerspace, a Makerspace cart, or you want to prototype within your classroom, the ChangeMaker Innovation Process™ can give you the framework and common language to bring about deep learning experiences.
